Syracuse, N.Y. — Community members are planning a local service project to clean historical markers during the fourth annual National Historic Marker Day on Friday, April 26. The cleaning project will take place between 9 and 11 a.m. at the village green.

Launched as a grassroots celebration by the William G. Pomeroy Foundation, a philanthropic organization based in Syracuse, N.Y., National Historic Marker Day brings people together to maintain local markers by cleaning them and providing an opportunity to celebrate and preserve history.

This fun and family-friendly celebration is held on the last Friday of every April. Individuals, as well as groups of all sizes, are welcome to volunteer, including families and friends, civic organizations, schools and young groups, to name a few.

National Historic Marker Day volunteers can anticipate exciting engagement, resources and activities for the fourth annual National Historic Marker Day. Those who want to participate can learn more, get updates and access to cleaning guides on the official National Historic Marker Day webpage on the Pomeroy Foundation website: https://www.wgpfoundation.org/national-historic-marker-day/.

Be sure to replace the About Us section with information on your organization or the organization who is participating.
